

Personal Acknowledgments

We are deeply indebted to the leadership at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center and the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation who agreed to cosponsorship of the Breast Health Global Initiative (BHGI) and its development of the Guidelines for International Breast Health and Cancer Treatment. In particular, we recognize John Potter, PhD and Lee Hartwell, PhD at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center as well as Susan Braun, Andy Halpern, and Diana Rowden at the Komen Foundation. These visionary cancer leaders have provided insightful guidance in creating the foundation through which this global endeavor for medically underserved women can exist.

The success of the BHGI and this publication is owed to many individuals from around the world. We extend our deepest appreciation to the invaluable role and key contributions of our many international participants. The members of our Steering Committee, Scientific Advisory Committee, and Consensus Panels all volunteered their time and insight to help make this most recent Global Summit 2005 possible. In particular, we thank Dr. Gabriel Hortobagyi, Chair of the BHGI Steering Committee, for his time, insight, and profound patience.

We acknowledge and thank our collaborating organizations, government agencies, and corporate partners who make this work globally representative, and possible.

We would like to thank and acknowledge our Global Summit Panel Cochairs, who generously devoted countless hours of their limited time to this work throughout the year; and to the contributing authors, all experts in their field, who have written these guidelines. The guidelines were developed as a fundamental medical tool for “best practices with limited resources” through their shared goal of improving breast health care and cancer treatment in limited-resource countries.

We would like to acknowledge The Breast Journal and Blackwell Publishing; and thank Dr. Shahla Masood, Editor of The Breast Journal, for collaborating on publication of the guidelines and supporting the mission and goals of this initiative.

In particular, we recognize the critical efforts of the BHGI core “team” of two who are central to this work. Susan London was the BHGI editor extraordinaire. Susan played an essential role in the development of the international guidelines. She provided invaluable, sophisticated assistance to our work, serving as both medical writer and publication editor. Susan’s superb writing skills were matched by her medical knowledge and amazing grace under pressure, working expertly with a wide range of writing styles, language limitations, and viewpoints. She worked at lightning speed, consolidating complex information from hundreds of communications to harmonize and polish the works of BHGI contributing authors from around the world. We were truly fortunate to have Susan on our team. Leslie Sullivan, BHGI Program Manager, was central to almost every aspect of the BHGI. Leslie contributed skillfully and energetically to the BHGI and this publication from beginning to end. She engaged BHGI partners and participants, and managed the operations, communications, and administration of the BHGI. Leslie’s contributions to this work have been essential and outstanding.
